Grantee Spotlight: Implementing National Open Court Data Standards in Pilot Courts

The National Open Court Data Standards (NODS) consists of business and technical court data standards designed to facilitate the sharing of court data, ensure consistency in how data are understood and used, and reduce the costs and efforts required for courts to respond to data requests. In addition, several states are using NODS as a framework to build statewide data repositories. Over the last four years, SJI has supported the implementation of NODS in 16 states. A recent evaluation of the project found that successful implementation has relied upon supportive executive leadership, dedicated staff, a designated NODS champion, and financial resources... ## NCSC to Bring AI Solutions to Rural Courts

Seventy-six percent of state courts are limited jurisdiction courts serving local communities—often under-resourced and without the same access to modern technology as larger court systems. To advance modernization and improve access to justice in these jurisdictions, the National Center for State Courts (NCSC) is launching a new initiative focused on applying AI tools to address long-standing structural challenges that limit efficiency, accessibility, and service quality in rural courts. The effort is supported by Microsoft, whose technology will inform potential solutions. The initiative aims to help close the digital divide facing the nation's rural courts. “Because small and rural... Read more

New National Playbook for States to Keep Youth Out of the Justice System

Children, teens, and young adults often enter the justice system because their health, education, and safety needs aren't met. As a result, justice systems are dealing with challenges they were never designed to address. The Council of State Governments \(CSG\) Justice Center's new research-based guide can help states prevent violence, expand opportunities, and keep youth out of the justice system. The Youth Safety Playbook for States includes a community-based service continuum, strategies for financing, infrastructure, policy, service, workforce, and a checklist for implementing each strategy. This playbook is a product of the CSG Justice Center's Collaborating for Youth and

Public Safety Initiative (CYPSI), which partners with states to strengthen and scale research-based services and supports for youth and their families... Read more
